ergy enough to look them up when an article is wanted. One of many instances of the enefits of advertising is related by a Pittsburg paper. The edi-tor was asking the experience of one of the patrons of his paper, to which he replied: for ten years the same business I am in was carried on, at the same stand, by one party, and by another par ty for three years. Both were industrious, sober, frugal and attentive to business. Neither of them, however, thought best to advertise, and their business only just furnished them a liv-ing. When I took the store ten vears ago I was in debt. I expended only fifty dollars the irst year in advertising. Next
